APPENDIX 5I

Historic Sites of Local Significance in Florida

For each Berkshire County community in the Byway Corridor we have briefly listed or discussed individual properties and/or historic districts that have been considered significant enough by individual property owners or local communities as to merit preservation enactment. This may be through a local, state or national historic registration or through a preservation restriction.

Properties so listed will be designated according to the definitions in the State Register of Historic Places 2000 as follows:

NRDIS: National Register District

NRIND: National Register of Individual Property

NRMRA: National Register Multiple Resource Area [Refers to a community-wide or area-wide designation that includes nomination of both individual and district properties.]

Historic Sites in Williamstown

Due to the large number of historic sites within the town, individual historic sites in the Williamstown area were listed within an approximate 1-block radius of the roadway. This is less than done for the more rural towns, in which historic structures within the Study Area were inventoried. Many of the sites were taken directly from the Williamstown Village Center Survey completed in July 1998. Historic districts have been discussed separately.
